

5 O'CLOCK EXTRA FOSTER'S FORGERIES.

$25,000 More to Be Added to the $168,000 Found Yesterday.

His Alleged Niece Said to Be Not Related to Him.

An Order of Arrest and an Attachment Out for Him.

Every effort on the part of the Trustees of the Gratuity Fund of the Produce Exchange was made to suppress the fact that the fund had been victimized for a large amount by means of fraudulent and forged mortgages.

The EVENING WORLD, however, which gets and publishes all the news, had ferreted out this carefully concealed fact, and when it appeared on the street shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday, announcing for the first time this stupendous swindle, the Produce Exchange officials moved the ban of secrecy from their lips and posted the facts in the case on the floor of the Exchange.

To-day's developments in the case are very interesting. Another mortgage, representing a loan of $25,000, has been found to be a forgery. This increases the loss to the fund through the dishonesty of its counsel to $193,000.

The trustees think this amount well represents the maximum of their loss.

An attachment has been issued against the forger's property.

An order of arrest is also out for him.

RUMORS RISE AT THE PRODUCE EXCHANGE. On the floor of the Produce Exchange this morning the Foster forgeries were the absorbing topic of conversation among the members.

They could not have occurred it was stated again and again without some negligence on the part of the trustees, and every one was on the qui vive for news. Rumors were rife that more fraudulent mortgages had been unearthed, and that the loss would exceed $200,000, and this proved to be partially true.

President Orr, who was reticent yesterday, after a conference with several of the other trustees and lawyer Horace E. Deming in his office after his arrival this morning, talked freely.

HAVE THEY REACHED THE BOTTOM? "We have got down to the bottom of the matter now," he said, "and in addition to the amount of the thirteen fraudulent mortgages discovered yesterday, there is only one more about there that is any uncertainty. It is for $25,000, and we are not able to say yet whether it is genuine or not. All the rest I can positively state are good, and in any case the loss will not exceed $193,000."

He asked about the liability of the trustees for this amount?

"Oh, there is not the slightest ground for charging any of the members of the Board for this loss," he said, "outside of Mr. Foster himself. I do not believe that there was a single person implicated in any of his transactions. He had been the attorney for the Exchange for sixteen years, and we trusted him implicitly."

President Orr said in addition that Foster, and not his firm, was the attorney for the Exchange, and that he felt sincere grief for Mr. Foster's partner, whom he believed to be entirely innocent of any of Foster's transactions.

In reference to the appearance of the fraudulent mortgages, Mr. Orr said:

"THE SEAL WAS BURSTED. The Register's seal had a blurred look, and the certificate of recording was in a blank form, stamped in red ink at the bottom, closely resembling the stamp used by Bedell in the same sort of transactions."

"I cannot be interviewed, however, which implicates Foster with Bedell in his fraudulent operations. The latter began his forgeries eight years ago, while Foster's first transactions were in 1883."

Mr. Orr said that Foster's father had not been asked to make good his son's dealings. He was reported to be worth about $800,000, but was a very conservative man and made no display of his wealth."

AN ORDER OF ARREST OUT. Lawyer Horace E. Deming, who has charge of the Foster matter, was caught in his office by an EVENING WORLD reporter early this afternoon. He declined to be interviewed, giving as an excuse that he was in a hurry to catch a train.

In answer to a note inquiring whether it was true that an attachment had been issued to seize $25,000 worth of Foster's property, and an order of arrest had been placed in the Sheriff's hands, he came out of his office, and raising his hands, exclaimed: "The order of arrest and the attachment have both been issued, and everything else in the world has been done to retrieve the stolen money."

MR. WENTWORTH WORRIED. Mr. Wentworth, Foster's law partner, was his wife in the Produce Exchange Building early this morning looking over the papers of the firm. He looked worried and all broken up.

"I would have believed this sooner of myself than of my partner," he said to a reporter of the EVENING WORLD. "I thought that Will Foster was the straightest man in New York."

"What about his niece, who lives as his adopted daughter at Bayport, L. I.?"

"It is perfectly true that she is his adopted daughter, but she is not his niece, or any relative, so far as I know. He adopted her five or six years ago and took out papers in the Court of Common Pleas."

"Do you know anything of a conveyance to her by Mr. Foster of a large amount of property?"

"Nothing whatever. I did not know that Mr. Foster owned very much property, certainly not $100,000 worth. There is nothing in his office that I ever saw that showed this."

THAT HE FORGED HIS FATHER'S NAME DENIED. "Have you any information regarding the report that he forged his father's name to a check for $9,000 before leaving town?"

"Not the slightest. He borrowed the money from the bank and gave his own note for part of the amount. I understand, and some Gratuity securities for the rest. I do not know where he is now and have heard nothing from him since he went away. I expect every moment, however, to see his death announced, and it would not surprise me at all."

LAWYER JOHN O'CONNOR, who was formerly a notary in Foster's office, and whose name is on the forged mortgages, said:

"I have been associated with Mr. Foster for many years, and during that time I have always looked upon him as a model man in business and in private life. I know absolutely nothing as to the irregularities with which he is charged in his private life, and if that is true, I am certain, and concealed them in a most marvellous manner."

"Do you know anything of his niece whom he adopted?"

"Not a thing, excepting she is not his niece, but a young girl to whom he had taken a liking and adopted legally. But I do not care to say anything more about that subject. And as he said he had a summons to appear at the Supreme Court and make an affidavit for an order of arrest and attachment against Foster, he hurried off."

JAMES P. FOSTER DOESN'T KNOW WHO MISS LULU FOSTER IS EITHER.

AN EVENING WORLD reporter called at the office of James P. Foster, a brother of the defaulting counsel of the Produce Exchange Gratuity Fund, this morning. Mr. Foster is a lawyer and practises at No. 154 Nassau street. There the reporter was informed that he was not in, but could be found at the headquarters of the Republic League of the United States, of which he is the President.

Here Mr. Foster was found in his private office.

"Who is the young lady residing in your brother's house at Bayport?" was asked.

"The papers say it is his adopted daughter," was the answer.

"Is she his adopted daughter?" queried the reporter.

"I don't know. The papers say so."

"Is she his niece?" was the next question.

"I don't know."

"Did you ever meet her?" he was next asked.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Has your brother made over to her his Bayport property valued at $100,000?"

"I don't know."

"Do you know what has become of her?"

"I do not."

GOT HIS FIRST INFORMATION FROM "THE EVENING WORLD."

"Is it a fact that your brother raised $9,000 on your father's securities?"

"I don't know. I know nothing whatever of it. I know I knew that he had disappeared when I read an account of the trouble in THE EVENING WORLD last evening."

WHAT FOSTER'S NEPHEW SAYS.

William B. Foster, sr., the father of the Produce Exchange Gratuity Fund's missing counsel, is wealthy, deeply respected, and a member of the Produce Exchange.

His place of business is located in the large double building No. 25 Canal street. Here he occupies the entire four stories of the building and does a most extensive business. He is a man of about sixty-five years of age.

When THE EVENING WORLD reporter called there today he was informed that Mr. Foster was in.

When he made known the object of his visit to the bookkeeper that gentleman promptly stated that Mr. Wm. B. Foster, jr., was his son.

"Do you know where your uncle is?" asked the reporter.

"He was at this office last Saturday, and since then I have not seen him," was the answer.

"Will one of those fellows who had a great deal of leisure to himself," the young man went on, "and someone who attended to his business when he was away must be the guilty party. He had plenty of money, a good income and I know he would not do such a thing."

"You know he travelled abroad for eight years, and upon his return put up at the Cumberland, in this city. He is a very impulsive fellow. During my vacation, three years ago, he was stopping near Bayport, L. I., and I will come to see me. We drove out to Bayport, and he saw the place he now lives in there and bought it."

"From that time on he came to office business, but left that entirely to his partner, Mr. Wentworth."

THE FORGER'S FATHER. While the reporter was conversing with Mr. Foster, sr., entered.

"The father had a far-away look in his eyes and a deep crease in his forehead. He bowed to the reporter, and when the latter asked him if it were true that he would make good the amount of his son's default if he were proven that he was a defaulter, he smiled sadly and answered:

"The Trustees have not yet asked me to do so. I was at the Exchange yesterday and nothing was said about it."

"Do you think he will pay you?"

"I am in no way interested, only in that he is my son."

"It looks bad, doesn't it?" continued the father, "but I am disappearing just what ought to be on hand to explain matters better."

"Do you think he is guilty?" was the next question.

DID HE LOSE IT IN STOCKS? "He had a good income and everything that he could desire. If he lost the money he must have lost it in stocks," was the answer.

"Did he speculate in stocks?"

"I don't know. I never knew much about his business matters."

"He called here frequently?"

"Yes, but we never talked over any of his business transactions. I have nothing more to say about an unfortunate affair."

With this the old man turned away, and bidding the reporter "good day," sat down at his desk to write.

THEY CAN'T ACCOUNT FOR IT. The young man who had announced himself as the nephew of the absconding lawyer, very much to the surprise of Mr. Foster, excepting that he lived modestly and quietly at his Bayport home.

He knew of no vice which his uncle possessed, and which would lead him to commit a crime of such magnitude as these forgeries to gratify it.

MISS LULU FOSTER IS NOT THE FORGER'S NIECE. Questioned with reference to the girl Lulu Foster, who lived with the lawyer at his home in Bayport, and who is described as Mr. Foster's niece and adopted daughter, the nephew was quite reticent, but by dint of persistent cross-questioning he was made to acknowledge that the girl is not in any way related to Foster.

She is now about eighteen years old, he said, and was adopted by Wm. B. Foster, jr., about five years ago.

He did not know who her relatives were or where she would be liable to stop while in the city. Though he visited his uncle at his home quite frequently, he says that he saw very little of Lulu.

Mr. Foster's nephew denied that his uncle's sister had died in Paris and that the young lady living at Bayport was her daughter.

SHE HAD LEFT BAYPORT TOO. This young lady left Bayport on a west-bound train yesterday afternoon at 2 p. m. and has not been seen since.

If she has followed Mr. Foster in his flight, Pinkerton's men will find it an easy matter to track him.

FOSTER NOT SAFE IN CANADA. Foster will not find Canada the place of refuge which it has been for so many of New York's second-rate and swindlers, if he has sought safety across her borders.

Forgery is an extraditable offense, and there are very few spots of solid ground on this globe where Foster can feel absolutely safe from the pursuit of the sleuth hounds of the law.

VERY LIKE BEDDELL'S FORGERIES. So similar in their character and execution were the forgeries charged against Foster to those which James E. Bedell acknowledged, that it was immediately asked: "Which was the tutor and which the pupil?"

Of course, these two men must be acquainted and cognizant of each other's misdeeds.

THE EVENING WORLD was unable to ascertain if this is a fact.

Judge Shipman, one of Bedell's employers, scouted the idea.

BEDDELL WON'T BE INTERVIEWED. Bedell himself was sought at his cell in the Tombs.

He could not resort to that old dodge of "tell the gentleman I'm out" to rid himself of the reporter and to the police request to interview him on the subject of the Gratuity Fund forgeries, he returned a very decided "No."

Warden Osborne explained that Mr. Bedell was confined to his room and unable to get out. He had been supplied with the daily papers and knew of the revelations involving Mr. Foster in forgeries similar to those committed by himself. He is reported as having made no comment on the story, however.

PINKERTON'S WORK TALK. Supt. Bangs, of Pinkerton's Detective Agency, refused to say anything regarding the pursuit of Foster, but volunteered the information that he would be only too glad to announce his capture.

One of the most surprised and shocked by the discovery of Foster's dishonesty was Col. James M. Varnum, a lawyer, at 31 Nassau street, who lives at 34 Gramercy Park, who in 1881 and 1882 occupied a suite of rooms adjoining Foster's, in the Cumberland Apartment House.

In an interview with an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day he said:

"I was not in the city in fact. I am not yet prepared to believe that Will Foster is a thief. I was as intimate with him as any one could be, I suppose, and I always considered him as a man of high honor."

"What were his habits when he lived at the Cumberland?" asked the reporter.

"Excellent. He never played cards; rarely drank intoxicating liquors, and never to my knowledge indulged in dissipation."

"Were you acquainted with his niece?"

"Not very well. I did not know much about her. I never met her until after Mr. Foster moved to Bayport. I have seen her only about six or seven times."

"It has been given out at Bayport that she is the child of a sister of Mr. Foster's, who died in Paris."

"Mr. Varnum shook his head vigorously as he answered: "No, that is not so. In fact, Mr. Foster has only one sister, and she is still alive. I do not know where she is at present."

"Can you tell me whose child she is?"

"No, come to think of it, I can not," replied Mr. Varnum.

He decided to say whether Mr. Foster was ever engaged to be married or not and refused to be questioned any further.

NOT WELL KNOWN IN THE EAST RESORTS. Foster was not known in any of the haunts of men about town, in Police Capt. Reddy's tenderloin precinct. About three times a week he visited the University Club, at Madison avenue and Twenty-sixth street, of which he was a member. He generally arrived in the day time and never remained long. He was admitted to membership in the Club about three years ago.

WHAT'S UP AT THE UNION CLUB? At the Union Club, corner of Twenty-first and Fifth avenues, of which he was also a member, the clerk told an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning that he had received strict orders not to speak about Mr. Foster or his affairs.

"Who gave you such orders?" asked the reporter.

"That I am not at liberty to tell either," was the answer.

From another source it was learned that Foster had joined the Club some time in 1881. At first he was a frequent visitor, but gradually fell away, and recently only went to the Club at rare intervals.

HIS ROOMS AT THE CUMBERLAND. When Foster's mother died, about eight years ago, the remaining members of the family decided to separate, and they gave up their Madison avenue residence. Will Foster went to live in a suite of rooms with a Col. Varnum, on the fifth floor of the Cumberland bachelor apartment-house, corner of Broadway and Twenty-second street.

Mr. Varnum, the superintendent of the house, said to the reporter to-day:

"He said to pay to know as little as possible about the tenants in the house, and, therefore, can give you very little information about Mr. Foster. He came here in 1881, I think. I could not say what rent he paid. All expenses were shared by Col. Varnum. I went away from here in 1882 and did not return until 1886. Then I found that Mr. Foster had left while I was away. This is absolutely all I can tell you about him," concluded Mr. Howe.

After leaving the apartment-house Mr. Foster went to keep house in Bayport, L. I. Ward Detectives Brett and Hayes and Hoffman House Detective Jacobs, when interviewed by the reporter this morning, declared that they did not think that Foster ever was a "rounder" in that precinct any how.

DID WOMEN CAUSE HIS RUIN? It was stated upon reliable authority this morning that clear proof had been obtained of some of Foster's irregularities in private. He was at one time, it is said, a frequent visitor of a notorious house in Thirty-third street, and afterwards of another place in Charles street, where he was infatuated with a woman of more than questionable character.

Inquiry elicited the fact that she had left the house on Tuesday last, saying that she was going out of town, and that she would not be there when she was called and that none of her acquaintances had heard anything of her since.

Foster disappeared about the same time.

ALL BAYPORT EXCITED. Bayport, Sept. 28.—This morning William B. Foster, jr., a handsome Queens Avenue native, near the shore of the Great South Bay, is closed up as tight as a drum.

It is in charge of the servants, of which there were six—a cookman, footman, butler and three maids.

One of the maids was the bonnie of Miss Foster, or as she is otherwise known, Miss Lulu Foster, the niece of Mr. Foster, and who calls herself Miss Foster, because she is legally adopted daughter.

Since Mr. Foster left here on the 9 o'clock train Wednesday morning nothing has been seen or heard of him. He carried no baggage.

This morning the village was all agog about his disappearance and that of his niece, who left here yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, taking with her a plethora of gripsock.

Miss Foster, otherwise known as Lulu Beloitte, is a good-looking brunette between nineteen and twenty years of age.

She is known here as the daughter of Mr. Foster's sister. Her mother, it is reported, died in Paris some years ago.

Foster went over to Paris some years ago and brought Miss Beloitte back with him.

When he built his villa here, about two years ago, his niece came with him. As soon as his handsome dwelling was completed and luxuriously furnished she presided over it as the absolute mistress. Her word was law.

The pair were frequently to be seen driving about the village, and they also went off fishing together.

Postmaster Edwards was the skipper on these fishing trips.

Mr. Foster flew high. He entertained the Vanderbilts, the Van Hensselaers, Roosevelts and other notable swells of society.

His receipts were elegant and he spent money with a liberal hand. He was considered wealthy.

It is said that Mr. Foster intimated that the house grounds belonged to his niece. The property is variously estimated to be worth from $50,000 to $100,000.

The general impression is that the niece had come out to meet him.

The young man from Foster & Wentworth's law office in New York, who arrived here yesterday afternoon to take charge of the house, left last night on the 8.05 train for New York.

A detective is watching the house.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND IS CONFIDENT. So Said Col. Lamont, Who Is Making New York a Short Visit.

Col. Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary of President Cleveland, is in the city, a guest of the Hoffman house. He and Mrs. Lamont occupy Gov. Hill's suite of rooms, on the Twenty-fifth street side of the new annex to the Capitol.

Col. Lamont left the hotel early this morning, and it is said that he called upon Collector Magone. Up to noon he was expected to attend the wedding of Gen. Schodde's daughter, which took place yesterday on Governor's Island.

A prominent member of the Democratic State Committee said to an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day:

"I had a long talk with Col. Lamont last night. He says that President Cleveland is very confident of the success of his re-election. He has no doubt of New York going Democratic. Since his arrival yesterday afternoon, Col. Lamont has had conferences with the members of the National Campaign Committee, and with ex-Senator Murtha, Chairman of the State Campaign Committee. They gave him encouraging news."

He is led to believe from what I have heard that Col. Lamont will have interviews with Commissioner Croker and Judge Power before he returns to Washington."

ESCAPED BY TELEGRAPH WIRES. Two Persons Got Out of Harm at a Fire in Chicago To-Day.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Fire destroyed the building of S. G. Willis & Co., furniture manufacturers, on Lake street, this morning, doing $75,000 damage. The blaze started in the rear of the building and ran up to the floor and roof by the elevator shaft.

It was not until the fire had reached the roof and great excitement prevailed. In the same block is the Sprague, Warner & Co. grocery house and other wholesale firms.

Several employees escaped by telegraph wires, and one was rescued by the firemen when inescapable from smoke.
